

Traveling to Gratitude Day 3 – Sunday, August 1

Today we are hitting the museums and spending some time with history. What in the museum of your life history do you have to be grateful for?

If your life was a museum filled with paintings and artifacts of all that you are grateful for having had over the years – the people, the experiences, the opportunities, the growth, the blessings, the lessons – what would be on display? Walk through the museum of your life today. You might think about each era and chapter of your life being a different wing of the museum.

One thing about history....no matter what happens in the future, the wonders that have been our lives up to this very day are permanent. There's no changing that, come what may. When I think about it that way it feels like a big blank check in my back pocket.

Don't forget to deposit a piece of historic gratitude in the Postcards & Pics bank vault today.
